

MSc Development Management

Preliminary reading list

2024-2025 Academic Year

BACKGROUND READINGS

There is no general textbook for the course, which brings together insights from a range of disciplines dealing with problems of management and institutional reform. The weekly reading lists identify a small number of key texts which everyone should read and provide a range of further readings for those particularly interested in the topic. The following is a list of general readings that cover key issues addressed in the course. There are, however, two texts from which the course draws heavily, which students should buy and begin reading before term starts.
